She sends this wish by gently squeezing the guests hand.

This continues around the circle until a wish is returned to the host princess.

The host princess thanks her guests for attending her enchanted tea party and then unwraps the wish circle by spinning to her right, raising her hands above her.

Dancing like a princess is bound to be fun for kids. Denny Newell, Senior Show Director for the Disneyland Resort, also believes dance holds oodles of benefits for the girls who want to learn some ballroom moves.

Ballroom Dance

You can ballroom dance like Sofia!

“It’s wonderful cardio because it doesn’t feel like exercise when you’re having fun and pretending you’re a princess,” says Newell. “You don’t realize you’re becoming more fit and developing strength and flexibility.”

There are also social benefits for kids as they learn to dance. “You really learn to communicate and have fun with other people through dancing,” says Newell. “There’s a long history of people coming together at social occasions and dancing.”

Studying some dance steps can prepare children for dancing in the future as well. “Just having some exposure to this kind of dancing can help children feel more confident in the future when they’re at a social event like a prom or formal gathering or even someday in the future at their own wedding.”

With these three tips from Newell, parents can help their little ones learn to take to the ballroom just like a princess:

Tip 1

Encourage kids to find the rhythm in a song. “Put on their favorite piece of music and let them move around,” says Newell. “Usually they find the rhythm on their own pretty quickly.”

Tip 2

Inspire kids to use their own creativity when they’re first learning to dance. “For children this can be another wonderful way for them to pretend and use their imagination,” says Newell. “Dressing up in a princess costume can add to their wonderful fantasy.”

Tip 3

Reassure them to keep moving even if finding the perfect steps right away is a little challenging. “It doesn’t matter if the steps are exact because it’s all really about having fun,” says Newell. “Just give them tons of positive reinforcement for being out there and moving to the music.”

Every princess in training must learn the proper steps before she attends the big ball with her Prince, so we've put together some special instructions to help you on your way.

Ballroom Dance

How to ballroom dance like Sofia!

Step 1

First you and your partner bow and curtsey to each other. You and your dance partner should face each other. The prince will bring his feet together and then brings his arm up and then into his waist. After that he bends at the waist with his arm tucked into his waist and bows to you.

You begin your curtsey to him by moving your right foot back a little. You then bend your left knee and slightly lift your beautiful princess gown with your left hand. Finally you gently bow your head. Fantastic!

The next move is the Minuet. Stand side by side about a foot apart (your prince's right shoulder should be next to your left shoulder) and facing in the same direction. The prince should raise his right hand toward his princess and the princess should raise put her left hand in his right hand.

Now, step sideways toward your partner with the foot closest to them. Next touch the outside foot to the inside foot as you sway to the music. After this, step sideways away from your partner to your original position, leading with your outside foot. Then touch your inside foot back to your outside foot, bringing your feet together in your starting position.

After this, elegantly cross to each other's other side, standing side by side again, and take each other's hands once more and repeat these steps. You've done a beautiful minuet!

Step 3

This step is called the Promenade. The prince stands in the center, gently holding the hand of the princess up and out as the princess moves around him so she can show everyone at the ball her gorgeous gown.

Complete one full circle around your prince and you've done it! Wonderful! You've shown everyone your lovely princess gown!

Now, stand facing your prince. Place your left hand on your prince's right shoulder. Then the prince should place his arm underneath the princess's left arm and his right hand on her left shoulder blade.

The right arm of the princess and the left arm of the prince should be outstretched to their sides and the princess should put her right hand in the left hand of the prince. Now simply sway back and forth, from side to side, in time with the music. Great!

Step 5

For this final step, start in the same position as you did for the previous dance step. This time, you will be moving in a circle together around your ballroom. Begin moving in a circle by taking one step back with your right foot as your prince takes one step forward with his left foot. Then the prince should take a small step back with his right foot and the princess should take a small step forward with her left foot.
